

BUILD FROM SCRATCH

DO YOU HAVE AN IDEA FOR A PRODUCT,
BUT DON'T KNOW WHERE TO START?
OR PERHAPS YOU KNOW WHAT TO DO,
BUT LACK THE MEANS TO MAKE IT HAPPEN?

What would you do if you were starting from scratch? This is a question businesses seldom ask themselves. Yet it's an essential one, a destructive one and ultimately one that's at the root of reinvention.

Startups often trump big companies simply because they have nothing to lose. They're more tolerant of risk, more aware of their own mortality and more willing to gamble. They don't know what business they're in, so they thrash around, trying things out.

Big companies have started to take notice. In 1950, the average company on the S&P 500 stayed there for half a century. In 2012, a company stays there for 13 years. The barriers to entry that made large organizations comfortable and complacent have quickly eroded in the face of ubiquitous computing.
